WHEN YOU CHECK IN AT THE LUSH, PALM TREE-STREWN Casa de Campo resort in the Dominican Republic, the first thing you're told is that you'll have your own golf cart—which is absolutely essential for getting around the 7,000 acres of this tropical hideout. Frequented by heads of state, European royalty, and A-list celebrities, Casa de Campo—which means “country house” in Spanish—was originally an executive getaway built by Charles Bluhdorn, of Gulf + Western, before it was bought by the sugar baron Fanjul family. The Fanjuls have added villas, a country club, an airport, a mall, a supermarket, and more to Casa de Campo, where this portfolio was shot.

The resort offers every activity under the sun: water sports, tennis, shooting, horseback riding, polo, yachting, and golf (the 63 holes here, designed by renowned course architect Pete Dye, are considered the best in the Caribbean), to name a few. Don't miss the couples massage and lavender sea salt exfoliating treatment at the Cygalle Healing Spa, which Israeli-born spa guru Cygalle Dias conceived in the on-site Zen garden. Get your dose of culture in Altos de Chavón, the nearby village, which has an art gallery, museums, and local artisans selling handmade goods. The town's breathtaking stone amphitheater seats 5,000 and has hosted the likes of Frank Sinatra and Alicia Keys.

In your free time, you'll have no lack of options for fueling up or winding down, with six restaurants—two of them run by the management of Le Cirque. And if you're the type who prefers a vacation spent lazing on the beach, the powdery soft sand, piercing turquoise water, and cooling palm fronds require no extra justification. To further ramp up the romance, the resort can help plan a catamaran excursion, reserve special gazebos and balcony tables for dinner, or arrange a picnic on a nearby private beach—just you, your husband, miles of sand, and a lobster buffet. Rooms from $545 per night, casadecampo.com.do.
